To Find Your Name in This Book:

Figures before names in the Genealogies indicate the generation, counting the Pioneer, Samuel Doak, as No. 1. The Index to Generation 4—appears on last pages of this book. If you are in generation 5, your parent's name is there, if in generation 6, your grandparents' name; and if in generation 7, your great-grandparents' name. Turn to page shown opposite that name, and read down through family to your own name.

To Trace Your Ancestry:

When you have found your name (following instructions given above) then the first preceding smaller number is by the names of your parents, the next preceding yet smaller number is by names of your grandparents, and so proceed back to the Pioneers, Samuel and Elizabeth Doak.

The Asterisk (*) is placed after names of persons reported as deceased prior to the publication of this book.

For probable relationship to other prominent Doaks in Ireland and America, you are referred to letters and other information published herein. See table of contents above.

From information received too late to rectify the error (because most copy was already in hands of publishers) it has become evident that in many families not all names of children are chronologically arranged as to dates of birth; but fortunately this is not a serious error.

A LATER HOME OF THE PIONEERS

DOAK ANCESTORS

SAMUEL and ELIZABETH (MALSEED) DOAK came from Ireland to the State of Pennsylvania about the year Eighteen Hundred, thence into Virginia (now West Virginia) in Eighteen Hundred Twenty-four. They purchased the farm which is now known as "The Perry Hudson Farm" at Central Station, Doddridge County; but soon sold this farm, accepting in part payment horses, wagons and guns—the first two being essentials to travel and the last named because of the necessity to kill wild game, and of the hostility of the Indians. They removed with their family into Ohio from which State they returned after a little more than a year had elapsed, and settled permanently on Middle Island Creek, near Joseph's Mills, in Tyler County, over the hill from the present town of Deep Valley. A deed, or land-grant, from Governor Wood to Samuel Doak, dated February 28, 1838, for "The residue of five hundred acres of land" is recorded in the county clerk's office in Middlebourne, the county seat.

From the forest they cut the trees and built their first home here of round logs, chunked and daubed, situate just across the flat from the George Bond home, near a large spring. Many years later Samuel Doak and his son Samuel, Jr., erected a new hewed-log house nearby, and they moved into it. A daughter of Samuel, Jr., now living at the age of eighty-six, says that no door being hung at the time, a blanket was hung at the opening, and a fire must be kept burning at night when the men were away to keep out the wolves. The picture published here was taken after this house ceased to be occupied as a home, and it has since been torn down.

Here these hardy pioneers—"Children of the Emerald Isle"—lived and loved and labored and reared their happy family. From the virgin forest they cleared their farm upon which it was necessary to grow most of their "living." They grew flax which they hackled and wove into linen cloth for their clothing, and wheat which they cut with a sickle, flailed out with clubs, and ground in a hand-mill. Here later probably they (like their children after them) sent their children to "Subscription Schools," paying tuition, the school occupying a round-log chunked-and-daubed hut, with greased paper for windows, the "scholars" sitting on benches hewed from split logs, turned flat side up, and with legs of pegs driven into holes bored into the curved (bark) side. These schools were of short duration, and many times far from the home.

Of their six children, the eldest two—William and John—died in their youth; the other six, Robert, Alexander, Samuel, Jr., James, Hiram, and Margaret, lived to "a ripe old age," rearing in turn their own families the children for the six families totaling fifty-six and grand-children totaling two hundred seventy, as shown in "The Beginning of the Family Tree" and the Index in this book. Meekness is one of the Doak virtues, and the truth of the Beatitude of Our Lord, "Blessed are the Meek for they shall inherit the earth," is manifest in the genealogies of this book wherein are recorded the names of more than thirty-two hundred descendants of these good people, including those so fortunate as to be adopted into the Doak family by "The Holy Bonds of Matrimony."

There are a few questions upon which the opinions of the oldest living descendants differ. There is a legend to the effect that a brother of Samuel Doak, probably Robert by name, came with them to America and that he either remained in Pennsylvania or removed into Ohio settling in the Sciota Valley.

Many of the descendants believe that Mrs. Doak's maiden name was Malseed, and the Author has found a few people in Ireland by that name, as published in the letters from Ireland in this book. Others have been informed that the name was Malsbury. Some say also that the name "Mary" preceded the name Elizabeth, constituting the double name Mary Elizabeth. It has been suggested that the latter name must have been a favorite with the family, because two of the sons married girls of that name.

Most agree that they were married before embarking, while a few descendants believe they became acquainted aboard ship, and were married upon landing in America. The following bit of legnedary information contained in a newspaper clipping in the possession of a grandchild who is still living, is of interest. After telling of the presence in the county seat of a grandchild of these pioneers, the article adds, "Here we might note a story of thrilling adventure. The foreparents of the Doaks came from Ireland; and when they started, 'Grandmother Doak' then a winsome young bride, fell overboard while negotiating the gang-plank at the wharf. 'Grandfather' Doak instantly sprang to the rescue. He was a strong sturdy young man, and came to the surface of the thirty odd feet of dampness with his loved one in a moment. But 'Grandmother' left one slipper in the soft sticky mud on the farther shore." Another legend says the wife was of Royal Blood, and because the husband was not, it was thought best to "run away" to America.

It is known that they came across "The Big Water" in a sail-boat, the only kind in use in those early days, and were fourteen weeks enroute. Some of their grandchildren yet living recall hearing grandmother tell of the thrilling—and in those days, rare—experience of crossing the ocean.

All those now living who had the pleasure of knowing these pioneers are ready and anxious to endorse this statement made a few days before the publication of this book, by their former neighbor, George Davis, now ninety years of age, and residing at Joseph's Mills, W. Va.—"They were fine people, and reared a good family."

ROBERT AND MARY (IRELAND) DOAK

ROBERT DOAK

ROBERT DOAK, the son of Samuel and Elizabeth Doak who came to this country from Ireland, was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, in 1804. Removed with his father's family to Tyler county, Virginia, (now West Virginia) in 1825. The same year he was married to Mary Ireland whose family also came from Pennsylvania.

Imagine the hardships when they settled and established their home in a log cabin in an unbroken forest near where the village of Wilbur now is. Here they felled the forest and reared their family of ten children. Their names and the dates of their births are as follows according to the family record written presumably by the head of the family himself: Margaret, December 8, 1826; Eliza, September 28, 1828; Agnes, August 25, 1831; Jesse, September 5, 1832; John, January 30, 1834; Alexander, February 23, 1836; Herrilda, May 1, 1838; Freeman, March 8, 1843; Elizabeth, January 1, 1845; Martha, August 1, 1847; Priscilla, August 3, 1849.

Robert Doak had two occupations, that of farmer and preacher of the Gospel. He took a very deep interest in matters pertaining to religion and became identified with the principles of the Restoration movement in 1836 and was one of the founders of the Arnolds Creek Church of Christ located three miles from his home. He did practically all the preaching for this church for many years and without remuneration so far as the writer's knowledge goes. He was an elder in this church at the time of his death and had been for forty-one years.

By his zeal for the cause and his indomitable energy in preaching the Gospel he assisted in the establishment of many churches throughout the section in which he lived. All of which was generally done without monetary consideration.

Early the records show he was a taxpayer in his adopted county of Tyler. A tax receipt, still well preserved, shows that in 1830, he paid to William Delashment, Sheriff of Tyler county, on two horses, sixteen cents, on other property sixty-two and one-half cents. In 1842 his taxes on 210 acres of land was 66 cents and on four horses 50 cents. In 1855 his taxes on 348 acres of land was $2.66 and on four slaves $2.04. By these figures one can see how taxes increased in those early days, but not so rapidly as in recent years.

Robert Doak died Feb. 13, 1885 and his wife Apr. 27, 1849. They were buried in the Arnolds Creek Church Cemetery.

The genealogy of the descendants of Robert and Mary Doak are published in this book, beginning on page 17.

ALEXANDER AND ELIZA (IRELAND) DOAK

ALEXANDER DOAK

ALEXANDER DOAK, born 1805, son of Samuel and Elizabeth Doak, married Eliza Ireland, born 1810, daughter of Alexander Ireland who according to the early History of Harrison County, W. Va., removed in 1818 from the vicinity of Clarksburg to the Joshua Davis farm on Otter Slide.

To this union were born four sons (whose records of births and deaths, with that of their wives, are found on monuments in the Arnolds Creek cemetery, as shown) and four daughters, as follows: Amy (who married Matthias Dotson), Isaiah (1839-1915, and Eleanor, his wife, 1837-1917), Sarah (who married Elias Thomas), Hamilton (1834-1898, and Martha A., his wife, 1832-1908), Elizabeth (who married Isaiah Griffin), Robert (1842-1915, and Ingabee, his wife, 1842-1917), S. Maxwell (1849-1921, and Harriet, his wife, 1849-1921), Gorrell (1851-1903), and Martha (who married Samuel Grimm).

There were sixty-five grandchildren—the largest number born to any child of the pioneers. These also lead in the number of descendants, at the time this book is published—near eight hundred, embracing about two hundred families.

Mr. Doak's home was on "Haman Ridge," above what is now Deep Valley, and within a mile of the home of his parents. A grandson who with his father and family lived with "Uncle Alec and Aunt Eliza" says, "When my granddad returned from Ohio he bought 300 acres from Caldwell for about two dollars per acre. He gave my dad our home place, and to two uncles where they lived. Mother said he chiefly paid for it with oats carried on horses to West Union, 11 or 12 miles distant, and sold for 25 cents per bushel. She said none of the land had been cleared, but grandfather cleared 3 acres for corn and a place for truck and garden the first year."

He was a member of the Christian church, and scarcely ever missed a meeting, although it was three or four miles distant. He was a local preacher and exhorter. He was a good neighbor, and had many friends. Another grandson remembers Grandma Eliza tell of buying her first calico dress. She paid 25 cents a yard, and got five yards. She paid for it with butter at five cents per pound—25 pounds of butter for five yards of calico,

Mr. Doak died October 17, 1889 and his wife February 16, 1893. They were buried in the Arnolds creek cemetery.

The genealogies of the descendants of Alexander Doak begin on page 31 of this book.

SAMUEL DOAK, JR. AND WIFE

SAMUEL DOAK, JR.

SAMUEL DOAK, JR., son of Samuel and Elizabeth Doak, lived with his father and mother on the old home place on Middle Island after his marriage until the death of his parents, and continued to live here during the remainder of his life. A daughter yet living, writes of him, "He married Elizabeth Thomas, the wedding occurring on the Thomas place on Long Run. They lived in the old log house on Middle Island Creek. Father cleared the land and built the house. It had no door but a blanket to serve as one; and I have heard father tell how mother kept a fire at night when he was away to keep the wolves from coming into the house. Later they moved to the new hewed log house which father also built, and in which both his parents lived until their death. I was five years old when mother died, and can remember her calling my brother to her bedside and saying she was going to leave us, requesting him to be a good boy and to never do anything to disgrace his mother's name. We went one and one-half miles to school, and walked three miles to church, Father walking with a cane so long as he was able to walk. He was kind, easy going, and a good Christian man. My oldest sister was sixteen when Mother died, and she kept house until she married four years later. Father married Margaret Collins after mother had been dead eight years."

Another writes, "On the farm he raised corn and wheat mostly, cutting the wheat with a sickle and later with a cradle, and would flail it out and tramp it out with horses. Their nearest store was about two miles distant. Here they sold oats, butter, chickens, eggs, rags, mayapple and ginseng roots; and bought calico, muslin, jeans, green coffee sugar and rice.

To Samuel and Elizabeth (Thomas) Doak were born eight children, as follows: Mary, Charles, Angeline, Katherine, Martha Jane, Elizabeth, Rebecca and Mariah Agnes; and by his second wife, Margaret (Collins) Doak, one son, Napoleon. There were forty-two grandchildren; and there are near six hundred descendants at the time of the publication of this book, comprising about one hundred fifty families, as shown in the genealogy of this family beginning on page 45 of this book.

To his oldest daughter Mary, who married Smith Freeman, belongs the distinction of having more descendants than any other grandchild of Samuel (Sr.) and Elizabeth Doak, numbering at the time of the publication of this book more than three hundred fifty, as shown in the genealogy.

Samuel Doak was a member of the Christian Church on Arnolds Creek, attending faithfully, and remaining throughout his life a consistent Christian.

No picture of JAMES DOAK has been found in the homes of his descendants. A grandson writes to the author that "James Doak always refused to have a picture taken."

JAMES DOAK, the son of Samuel and Elizabeth Doak was born, (according to information given by him to the census taker in 1850, and recorded in the census for that year) in the year 1800, and his wife was born two years later.

He was reared in the home of his parents on Middle Island Creek, near the little town (which was probably built many years after his birth) which boasted of a mill, a store, and a blacksmith shop—and the name "Lick-Skillet." When the mill burned in the "'80's" and a modern roller flouring mill was erected, the town took the more imposing name of Deep Valley, which name it still retains. He attended the subscription schools of his time, a tuition of about $2.50 per month being paid by each pupil to the teacher, his salary thus being realized. He helped to grow flax which had to be hackled and spun and woven into cloth for his clothing, and wheat which must be cut with the sickle, threshed with the "flail" and tramped out by the horses. His reward was probably realized when as a small boy he took this wheat and the corn to Joseph's (water-power) Mill near his home, or to "Duty's Mill," the old water mill near the mouth of Arnolds Creek, and must wait his turn in the grinding of his grist, which waiting afforded ample time for hooking the finny tribe along the creek bank.

James Doak was married to Miss Hannah Davis, (whose family came from the state of Ohio) and their home was on the rise directly fronting the mouth of Long Run of Arnolds Creek, where they owned about one hundred acres of land. To this union were born twelve children, as follows: William, David, John, Sarah Ann, Thomas, Albert, Gilbert, two children unnamed who died in infancy, Katherine, Marion and Alexander. Only six of these lived to rear families, as will be seen in the genealogy of the descendants of James Doak, beginning on page 56 of this book. The oldest son, William, bears the distinction of having the second largest number of descendants of any of the 56 grandchildren of Samuel and Elizabeth Doak, numbering at the time of the publication of this book about 300. James and Hannah Doak had forty-one grandchildren, and now have a total of near six hundred descendants, comprising about 150 families.

One of the grandchildren writes of James Doak, "He was a good-natured man, very religious, and a member of the Christian church."

HIRAM DOAK AND WIFE

HIRAM DOAK grew to manhood in the home on Middle Island creek, in Tyler county, W. Va., and married Elizabeth Joseph, the daughter of a neighbor. To this union were born eight children, viz: Marie Jane, Almarine, Nathan, Perry, Emeline, George W., Waitman and Katherine. There were thirty-four grandchildren, with a total of more than two hundred fifty descendants at the time of the publication of this book.

The family home was on "Haman Ridge," on farm now owned by Maurice Ash, until in 1866, following the advice of Horace Greeley—"Go West and grow up with the country"—he removed with his family to the state of Kansas.

His youngest son, Waitman Doak, now living in Kansas, writes to the author, "We came to Kansas in 1866. There weren't many people here at that time, no schools or churches, just a small trading point at Concordia, Kansas. The boys who were old enough took homesteads when we first came. It was almost an Indian country here then, but we got along all right through the good and bad times of our lives. My brother Perry and I hunted buffalo in the winter time for their hides, and in summer I rode the cattle trails until 1874. Before we came West, Father had carried the mail from Pennsboro to Sistersville, for twelve years. Later in life, he owned a farm of about two hundred acres here, and was at one time Justice of the Peace. He was good-natured—was a Christian, a member of the United Brethren Church and did substitute preaching.”

A niece writes of Uncle Hiram, “After coming to Kansas, he went back to Virginia and brought about forty immigrants to Kansas. We were of this number. He was a smart, well-read man, and firm in his belief. He was a member of the U. B. Church, attending regularly a distance of about four miles. He was licensed as a local exhorter.”

The biographical History of Cloud County, Kansas, has much good to say of Hiram Doak and his family.

A grandson, Judge Clarence J. Malone, of Nebraska, writes of him, “My grandfather was one of the characters of the early West, a man of strong personality, great will, and indomitable courage. He used to discipline not only his children, but his grandchildren with an iron hand. He was the true ruler of the colony. There was not much law in those early days when he came to Kansas, except what he administered himself. He was a local preacher and exhorter, a man highly respected and regarded by all who knew him. Looking back and remembering him as I do, and the things that he used to do—he used to take me with him in the buggy when he drove through the colony, when he had some special message that he wanted to give to the people, and I remember now one thing in particular, that in stopping at a place to see someone, he never left his vehicle. They always came to him, even though they might be off in the field, they would leave their teams or drive them in, and come and talk to him. I remember the conversation was always in the nature of a command from him to them. He was telling them what to do, and as I remember it, they accepted it all kindly and without any resentment. He died about 1884, and he and his wife lie buried in the cemetery near Concordia.

The generalogy of the descendants of Hiram Doak begin on page 71 of this book.

MARGARET "PEGGY" (DOAK) WILLIAMSON

MARGARET (DOAK) WILLIAMSON

("Aunt Peggy")

Margaret, the youngest child, and only daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth Doak was born on May 1, 1814. Early in life she became a Christian, joined the Christian Church on Arnolds Creek, more than two miles from her home, where she attended faithfully, continuing a consistent Christian throughout her life.

She married Alexander Williamson, to which union were born nine children, as follows: Louisa, Martha, Evaline, John, Eliza Ann, Judith, Amy, Sarah Elizabeth, and Margaret Virginia. There were thirty grandchildren, and at the time this book is published a total of more than two hundred descendants, comprising about fifty families. The genealogies of these families begin on page 75 of this book.

Aunt Peggy was kind and loving, but strict with her family, punishing them for most part by "lecturing," but sometimes by spanking. A granddaughter tells of a time when she and her brothers were left with Aunt Peggy while the family was moving. One of the grandsons in his play knocked grandmother's pipe from the mantel and broke it upon the hearth. Grandmother turned him across her knee and spanked him, then buried her face in her hands and cried more than the child. She says they spent the evenings playing on the floor in front of the fire, while Aunt Peggy knitted and worked at the spinning wheel. Uncle John would sit by the fire and sing the notes until bedtime. He sang the notes over and over until he was sure of a tune. The songs he sang were in the "Meetin' Books" as they were called.

Another grandchild remembers hearing Aunt Peggy tell of the time the stars fell, in 1833 she thinks it was, and said she thought nothing much of it, for she thought it was but natural for them to do so.

The home of Alexander Williamson and his wife, "Aunt Peggy," was on "Haman Ridge," about two miles from the home of her parents. A daughter yet living writes to the author, "Her husband Alexander Williamson died when I was but seven years old, and because of her great love for her family, she remained a widow the balance of her life."

She died August 25th, 1905, and was buried in the Arnolds Creek cemetery.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME "DOAK"—ITS MEANING

A letter received by the Author from Joseph Dunn, Professor of Irish History, Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., dated April 17th, 1931, says in part:

The name Doak (also spelled Doake, Doig) is, I believe, not very common in Ireland. It may possibly come, as has been supposed, from Irish MacDobboic, with dropping of mac "Son," as often happens, and mean 'The Son of David' (in a diminutive form), Davidson. When the first element, mac, is preserved, the name is found anglicized: M'Davock, M'Davog, M'Doug. If the initial D—of the word is aspirated, after mac the word is found anglicized: M'Cawque, M'Cavoge, M'Cavog, Mac Cook, Cook(e), etc. All these forms of the name are actually found, though some of them are rare. There is no doubt that the Doaks all came originally from Ulster."

J. D. Hackett, Librarian, American Irish Historical Society, New York, in a letter to the Author, dated April 27th, says: "It may interest you to know that the name means 'Little David,' and that a David Doak, of Fannit, arrived from Londonderry in New York in 1811, on the 'Westport.'"

For other authentic methods of spelling the name you are referred to the letter received by the Author from Belfast, Ireland, and published elsewhere in this book, especially to extract to Benn's History of Belfast, about Hugh Doak, Sovereign of Belfast in 1647.

LETTERS FROM "OLD IRELAND"

A letter addressed to the Author, written at Belfast, Ireland, on May 5th, 1931, says in part:

"Yours of April 9th came to hand in due time. Since then I have been making inquiries about the Doak family and also looking up records which are in our keeping and also in Lindenhall Library.

I send you on some notes, not wishing to wait longer before acknowledging the receipt of your letter and postage (3d).

In the Hearth Money Roll for County Anboin (See next letter for explanation of "Hearth Money Roll"—Author) I find William Doagh in 1669. He lived at Ballycor, in the Parish of Rashee two miles from Ballyclare and Hugh Doak the Sovereign (meaning Lord-Mayor—Author) of Belfast. With this exception the Doak family are all found about Dromore and Dromora in County Down, but not so early as 1669. There are no Hearth Lists for County Down unfortunately. The Glenlagan family are Land-lords. One of these is an Elder in one of the Dromore Presbyterian Churches, and a daughter is the wife of the young Minister . . . I made application to the Minister of 1st Dromora for the liberty of a search in the old Register of that Congregation, to which the family all belonged before 2nd Dromara was founded in 1845. The 1st Congregation was in existence in 1714. I see the name was spelled Doake in the 1st Congregational history. . .

Please ask any questions you wish. Among so many, it will be difficult to trace your particular branch.

From the same writer:

Belfast, Ireland, June 17, 1931.

. . . I found the Index to Dromore Wills from which I copied, in the Lindenhall Library here. The Wills were all destroyed in the Four Courts, Dublin. I asked the Minister of First Dromora for the loan of the oldest Congregational Register in his possession, and he very kindly intrusted me with it for one week. I copied all Doak entries from the Baptisms and Marriages, but unfortunately they only go back to 1817. (Inquiry had been made for records around 1800, hoping to find those concerning our own Samuel Doak and Mary Elizabeth (Malceed or Malsberry) Doak. (Author) Between 1819 and 1839 there are about twenty marriages and about 30 baptisms . . . The name "Malseed" I did not find there. It is not in the Hearth Money Rolls for 1663-9 (the names of those who had a hearth, and paid a tax in those years.) The name (Malseed) is rare in Ireland in these days. There is a family in Londonderry of the name long ago—a daughter is the wife of a minister, and a son is Dr. Malseed. I do not find the name in the Glasgow University Graduates book, 1728-1858, or in the "Memorials of the Dead."

I am sorry I cannot help you further. If you wish a copy of the numerous entries from the Dromora Book, I shall send to you. If one knew for certain what district of congregation Samuel Doak belonged to before he left for America, we might do something, but this information is lacking in nearly all the inquiries which come to us from America."

And From England:

Culleton's Heraldic Office Ltd.

2, King Street, St. James's, London, S. W. 1.
April 18th, 1931.

Dear Sir:

Ireland today is not a very satisfactory place for record searching in view of the loss of so many records during the various Irish troubles, but as the family were not Catholics and were residents in Northern Ireland the possibilities of tracing the genealogy are very much better than they otherwise would be.

Yours faithfully,
for Culleton's Heraldic Office Ltd.

WILLIAM N. DOAK'S ANCESTRY BACK TO
"NORTH OF IRELAND"

421 Moore Street,
Bristol, Virginia.
May 4, 1931

Rev. B. E. Hanes,
Elkins, W. Va.

My Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter to my brother, Secretary of Labor Doak, I am very glad to give you the following information concerning our family.

Robert, Samuel and David Doak came from the North of Ireland to Chester County, Penn., thence to Augusta County, Virginia, arriving about 1740.

The Rev. Samuel Doak of Tennessee is not a lineal ancestor of ours, though of the same family, he being a descendant of Samuel, Sr., and his wife, Janet Mitchell, while we descend through the brother David, Sr., and his wife, Mary. The third brother, Robert, who lived and died at old Mt. Airy is correctly referred to by Mr. Smith.

Our line runs:

1. David Doak (wife Mary).
2. John (born 1762) wife Rebecca Wilson married 1805.
3. Andley (Edley) Doak (born 1807 died 1897) wife Elizabeth Creger (born 1821 died 1893.)
4. Canero Drayton Doak (born 1843 died 1919) wife Elizabeth Dutton (born 1844 died 1931) married 1865.
- 5 William N. Doak, etc.

David's will, probated October 2, 1787, Montgomery County, Virginia mentions wife Mary; sons, David, Samuel, Nathaniel, William, James, Robert, Thomas, Alexander, John and daughters, Elizabeth, Jane, Mary, Margaret—and their descendants scattered far and wide.

Our home is a part of the original tract known as Black Lick (sometimes Black Buffalo Lick) comprising a large part of what is now Wythe County, Virginia. Deeds to hundreds of acres of this plot to David and Mary Doak were made as early as 1768 and since then my immediate family have owned the land.

As to the relationship between your John and Elizabeth Doak I am unable to say, but recently we have learned of near relatives as far as Iowa.

With best wishes, I am,

Yours very truly,
(Mrs. D. F.) Lula Doak McCarty.

Another Letter from Mrs. McCarty:

May 20, 1931.

My Dear Mr. Hanes:

I have just returned from a visit with my brother, the Secretary of Labor and found your most interesting letter, relating to the Doak Reunion. It must be wonderful to see together so many people belonging to one family, or rather descendants of one man, and I am sure that my brother will consider it an honor to meet with, and address them, if he is not engaged at that time. I think perhaps you should write him direct at once, as he has so many speaking dates.

I am so much interested in any thing relating to the Doak Ancestry, and would appreciate very much any information you may receive from Ireland—and if I can at any time give you any information I will be glad to do so.

Sincerely,
(Mrs. D. F.) Lulu Doak McCarty.

OTHER PROMINENT DOAKS IN AMERICA FROM "NORTH OF IRELAND"

Rev. Samuel Doak, D. D., Pioneer Founder of Colleges in America. (from "The National Cyclopedia of American Biography, page 340-341—book found in Carnegie Library, Pittsburgh, Pa.)

"DOAK, Samuel, founder and first president of Washington College, Tennessee (1795-1818) was born in Augusta County, Va., Aug. 1, 1749, son of Samuel and Jane (Mitchel) Doak. His parents, natives of Ireland, and of Scotch extraction, emigrated to America early in the last century, settling in Chester county, Pa., and later removing to Augusta county, Va. His father was a farmer, and the son's early life was hampered by poverty, although with an unquenchable thirst for knowledge he struggled manfully for an education. At the age of sixteen he began the study of Latin under a Mr. Alexander, probably, Archibald, grandfather of the famous Rev. Dr. Archibald Alexander, who was at that time teaching school in this neighborhood, and in 1773 he entered Princeton College, where he was graduated in 1775. He at once began the study of theology, and was licensed to preach by the Hanover (Va.) presbytery, Oct. 31, 1777. He began his work among the frontier settlements of southwestern Virginia, in Washington county, and later at the Holston settlement, now part of Sullivan County, Tenn., where he remained two years. While in search of a more promising field of usefulness, early in 1780, he met some settlers in the neighborhood of Salem, Tenn., who crowded about him and requested a sermon. Using his horse as a pulpit, he delivered so pleasing and helpful a discourse that they forthwith importuned him to remain among them. Here he remained and purchased a farm. He immediately gathered the pioneer families under his ministry and their children under his tuition, forming the Salem Congregation. He built a log schoolhouse, and in 1783 obtained a charter from the legislature of North Carolina, which then embraced that portion of Tennessee; and again in 1785 he obtained another charter from the legislature of the state of Franklin, in session at Jonesborough (now in Washington county, Tenn.), on both occasions giving it the name "Martin Academy" in honor of Gov. Alexander Martin of North Carolina. Although there remains no record of his work in the school during the first twelve years of its existence, many young men educated by him subsequently became useful and eminent. One of them, Dr. J. G. M. Ramsey, in his "Annals of Tennessee" says that it was not only the "first literary institution ever established in the Mississippi valley west of the Alleghnies," but also "for many years the only, and for still more the principal seat of learning in the western country." During this period, however, Dr. Doak had continued pastor of the Salem Church, which was one of the first in this region, and had also organized a number of other churches among the settlers. By an act of the legislature of the "Territory of the United States of America, South of the River Ohio," dated July 8, 1795, the school was chartered as a college empowered to grant academic degrees; and in honor of George Washington, then for the second time president of the United States, it was called Washington College. From the minutes of the first meeting of the board of trustees, held July 23, 1795, it appears that the academy had received 420 acres of land on the Doe river from Col. Waightstill Avery, besides numerous contributions of money, and later Alexander Mathes donated a valuable tract of fifty acres adjoining the property of Dr. Doak, where the college building then stood, which is the site of the modern institution. In 1798 while in the East as commissioner of the general assembly, Dr. Doak collected the nucleus of a library, which he transported 500 miles across the mountains on pack horses; and in the same year the Avery lands were sold and the proceeds expended in globes, maps and other equipments. Dr. Doak resigned in 1818 after presiding over the institution for thirty-five years, and soon after removed to Green county, Tenn within the bounds of Mt. Bethel Church, where he aided the second son, Rev. Samuel Witherspoon Doak, in conducting Tusculum Academy, chartered as Tusculum College in 1844. In character, Dr. Doak was possessed of rare firmness, dignity and decision; a natural leader of men and a great organizer. Through all the perils and hardships of pioneer life, he remained true to his noble purpose, and justly merits the title "Apostle of learning and religion in the West." As a preacher he was original, bold, forcible, even entertaining; and as a teacher he was thoroughly well qualified, a good disciplinarian and a master in Latin, Greek and metaphysics. His creed was thoroughly Calvinistic, and he taught and propounded it with an earnestness and lucidity calculated to fix its great truths upon the minds of the many young men trained by him for the ministry. He was on several occasions delegate and commissioner of his synod, and in 1784 was a member of the constitutional convention of the proposed state of Franklin. He at that time furnished a clause providing for a university to be established by legislative enactment before 1787, and "to be endowed liberally." The degree of D. D. was conferred on him by both Washington and Greenville colleges in 1818. Dr. Doak was married in 1776 or '77 to Esther H., daughter of Rev. John Montgomery of Virginia, and had two sons and four daughters. He died in Greene County, Tenn., Dec. 12, 1829.

This and the following pages of the Cyclopedia tell of Samuel Doak's son John Whitefield Doak, who became second President of Washington College, 1818-1820. His third son, Rev. Archibald Alexander Doak was President of Washington College 1840-1850. Rev. John Whitefield Doak's brother, Rev. Samuel Witherspoon Doak was its president 1838-1840.

Interesting letters received from a great-grandson (now living) of above named Rev. Samuel Doak.

Huntsville, Ala.

Rev. B. E. Hanes
Pastor First Church of Christ
Elkins, W. Va.

My Dear Sir and Brother:

Your esteemed letter of March 24th came several days ago.

You made a mistake though in addressing me as Pastor of the Presbyterian. I am a Prebysterian minister, now past 84 years of age. Am on the honorably retired Roll of the Presbytery of Atlanta. After my retirement I came to Huntsville and supplied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church of Huntsville, while they were without a pastor, and, now make my home with Mrs. Wilson, my daughter. Dr. Samuel Doak, whom you speak of as "preacher, educator and minister of the Presbyterian church was my great-grandfather. He came to what is now Tennessee, about 1778; founded a Presbyterian church and also a college in Washington county, Tenn., near Jonesboro, the county seat. My grandfather, John W. Doak, succeeded him as pastor of the Salem church, and President of Washington College. My father succeeded my grandfather as pastor of Salem church and president of Washington College. I am of the fourth generation of ministers, in the direct line. Rev. Archibald Alexander Doak, D. D., was my father, a son of Dr. John W. Doak.

H. M. Doak was editor of the Nashville American for some years after the war between the states. He died a few years ago. We must be near akin, and I gladly greet you as a relative. Let me know, if in any way I can help you. Will be glad to hear from you again.

Very Sincerely Yours,
A. S. DOAK.

Dear Brother Hanes:

Your letter of May 12th was received and welcomed.

I have learned that Sec'y. of Labor Wm. N. Doak was related to my great-grandfather. I am glad to know the real relationship. My knowledge of the Doaks extends only to my G. G. P. The Irish problem is too much for me.

Yours Very Cordially,
A. S. DOAK.

From another Minister, also a Descendant of this Rev. Samuel Doak:

Georgetown, Ky., Nov. 9, 1923.

Dear Sir:

I am glad to hear from you and about our line too. My people came from Ulster, originally settling in Pennsylvania, and from there into Virginia, where a Col. Doak was Sheriff of Augusta County, when it embraced most of the middle West. From there another ancestor, Samuel Doak, came to East Tennessee, founding the first college west of the Alleghenies. You can see reference to this in Col. Roosevelt's "Winning of the West." Any thing that I can tell you, I shall be glad to do so. With best wishes, I am,

Very Truly,
A. H. DOAK.

Dear Sir and Brother:

Your letter regarding the Doak ancestry received. I am very sorry that I cannot add anything material to what I wrote before except this: My information is that the Rev. A. A. Doak whom you mention was not the son of Samuel D., but of his son, John D. This Archibald D., was the brother of my ancestor, Samuel. The name Archibald came from the Alexander family into which John married.

Sorry that I cannot give you any information about the Samuel D in your family.

With the best of wishes.

Very Truly,
A. H. DOAK.

A family record, in Pennsylvania, states:

"Sarah Paxton married John Cowan—1815. Daughter, Sara Cowan married Rev. Arch A. Doak, son of Rev. Samuel Doak. They lived near Lebanon, Tenn. Children: 1—H. M. Doak was editor "The American Citizen," published in Nashville, Tenn., and was clerk of District Court of Tenn. 2—Sara Doak married B. F. Shaw—died 1881.

MORE ABOUT REV. SAMUEL DOAK AND OTHERS

From "Sketches of Virginia," published in 1855:

These first settlers of this beautiful country (at forks of Shenandoah) were like those of Opecquon, from the North of Ireland, the blended Scotch-Irish, and in search, as they said, of freedom of conscience with a competence in the wilderness; and for these they cheerfully left their homes and kindred in Ireland.

"Doak, Montgomery, Houston and Wilson became ministers of the gospel. Dr. Doak, well known in Tennessee as the laborious patron of literature, and minister of the gospel. Houston and Wilson used to tell of Doak, that as his parents lived in the bounds of Bethal, too far from the school to live at home, he erected a cabin near the school house for his convenience; and that the boys, in their fun, would frequently, while Doak was engaged with his teacher, break into his cabin and derange his apparatus for cooking, and make sad work of his housekeeping; all which he bore with great good humor, and went on cheerfully with his studies in preparation for that life of trial and usefulness as a pioneer of the gospel and sound education in Tennessee."

It tells of his ordination to the Presbyterian ministry in 1776, the year of the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. B. E. Hanes,

Elkins, W. Va.

Dear Mr. Hanes:

Replying to yours of the 24th.

I can give you my own Doak family connection, as follows:

Samuel Doak from North of Ireland to Chester County, Pennsylvania, settled in Augusta County, Virginia, and married Jane Mitchell.

To this union was born several children, one of which was Rev. Samuel Doak, born in Augusta County, Virginia, August 1, 1749; died 1829—a minister of the Presbyterian Church, and founder of what is now Tusculum College, at Greeneville, Tenn.

His son, John W. Doak, was also a minister; the latter's son, John N. Doak, was my mother's father.

Yours Very Truly,
T. R. PRESTON.

MORE PENNSYLVANIA DOAKS

(From "Biographical Album of Prominent Pennsylvanians," pgs. 182-183.)

James Doak, Jr., born in Londonderry, Ireland, June 14, 1837, came with his parents to America, when about seven years old. The family, after a brief residence in N. Y., settled in Philadelphia, where this son, one of six children, became a man of wealth and influence.

(From the History of Washington County, Pennsylvania:)

"Robert Doak came from Harrisburg before 1780 and settled on land which was surveyed June 2, 1785, containing 400 acres, named "Doak Plain." Robert and his son William lived on the farm till their death (Robert died 1803; Wm. died 1857). He use to relate that they were driven from the place several times by the Indians, and once remained away two years."

Franklin Doak, born in 1840, a Civil War soldier, stated in a conversation, at Brownsville, Pa., on June 6, 1928, that his father, Robert Doak, had five children, Jack, John, Julia, Sarah, Franklin; and that his father's brother, Joseph, had a son William, whose son was named Robert. The old soldier's grandfather's name was Robert.

SOME OTHER DOAKS NOW LIVING IN U. S. A.

In addition to those spoken of at greater length in this book, the author has communicated with others bearing the same name, most of whom are able to trace their ancestry back also to the North of Ireland.

Frank F. Doak, Assistant Secretary of the Fidelity Trust Company, Pittsburgh, writes: "My father was William Doak, born 1853 in the old city of Allegheny, now a part of Pittsburgh. His father was William Doak, who came to this country from Belfast (Ireland) in 1848. My father had several cousins in Pittsburgh, evidently the sons and daughters of his father's brothers."

Miss Sara Doak of Pittsburgh writes: "My father's name was Hugh, and his brother's name was William. There were two other brothers, John and James, but neither one came to this country. My father came from Dromore, County Down. His father's name was Richard."

Miss Sarah Doak of Wilkinsburg, Pa., writes: "My father's name was Robert. His brother, William's family was the first Doak family in Pittsburgh. They had a brother, John, in Canada. My father came from the North of Ireland in 1861; his brother William came many years earlier. Father had two uncles who were surgeons, one of them located in Dublin. Alexander and Robert seemed to be family names. My brother's name is Robert, and his son's also. I once heard father say that all the Doaks in the North of Ireland were kin, so I have a feeling we are the same people, and wish I knew more of my ancestors. Secretary of Labor Doak's picture looks like the Doaks in our family. Father said I was a real Doak."

John M. Doak, of Del Rio, Texas, writes: "My father was Jonathan A. Doak. He came to Texas from Mississippi about 1849. I know very little about his people, but he told me that he was Irish. I heard him speak of two brothers, Boyd and John. John came to Texas.

N. B. Mavity, cashier French Lick State Bank, French Lick, Ind., writes: "Robert Doak, born in Ireland, came to Pennsylvania with his two brothers and a sister. Later settled in Virginia. He and his brothers were soldiers in the French and Indian Wars. James Doak, a son, was born about 1760. Joseph Doak, his son, was born in 1786. Robert, his son, was born in 1815. His daughter was my mother."

Rev. D. B. Doak, pastor Methodist Church, Plainview, Texas, writes: "Three brothers, Nathaniel, Robert, and Samuel Doak came to America before the Revolutionary War, and settled in Augusta County, Virginia. I suppose we are from the North of Ireland. It has been my understanding that my family are of Scotch-Irish line. My great-grandfather, Nathaniel, had the following children: John, Alexander Shields, Margaret Elizabeth, Thomas, Ann Eliza, Sophia and Lavina. These moved almost a hundred years ago to Missouri. Alexander Shields Doak, my grandfather, had four children: Jane, Peter Porter, Alexander Shields, and Henry Bascom. Henry Bascom was my father I have two brothers, William and Charles. Others of the name in Texas are Hugh, Charles, and a Doctor Doak. My great-Grandfather's brother Robert was a Captain in the Revolution, later rose to Colonel, and was for sometime in the Virginia Legislature. His brother Samuel was a Presbyterian minister and educator. He moved to Tennessee, and was the founder of Washington College." (Author's note: It would seem that these three brothers, Nathaniel, Robert, and Samuel are probably sons of Samuel Senior, who came from the North of Ireland with his brothers, Robert and David, the last named being the ancestor of Secretary of Labor, Will N. Doak, of whom more is said on another page.)

John D. Doak, of Spokane, Washington, writes: "I am a Doak, and proud of it. My people came to America sometime prior to the Revolution, and settled in Pennsylvania. When the Revolution was on, they moved to Withe County, Virginia. My grandfather's given name was James, and his brother's was William. My grandfather's children were John, Thomas, Fleming, Rebecca, Eliza, Jane and Ellen. This family came from Virginia to Iowa about 1848-50. Now, my dear friend, if you can tell me who I am, you sure can do more than I can—in this family mix-up of nearly two hundred years. (Author's note: My reply furnished the evidence that he is a descendant of David Doak, ancestor of Secretary of Labor, Will N. Doak, as shown elsewhere in this book.)

VALUABLE INFORMATION FROM IRELAND

Contained in Letters received by the Author, and copied from Records in Belfast and Dromore, etc.:
From Penns History of Belfast:

Hugh Doak, or Doke, or Duok, or Diroach in all of which methods the name is spelled appears more frequently in the Records than any other person of his time under his well-known signature of H. D. He was Sovereign in 1647 and one of the busiest and best known persons in the troublous times in which he lived. He was the Sovereign who was said to be unable to write. His signature is certainly always in the form of initials. The christian name sometimes written before them and the surname after. A full signature even at the end of Doak's will is non-existent, the familiar initials, strictly identical with those in the Records, being alone appended to that important document. An extract from it will be sufficient; it gives the names of some places and is explanatory of Doak's relationship to a more important and better-known Belfast family than his own.

He says:

Hugh Doak's Will

I bequeath to my grandchild Hugh Pottinger, son to Thomas Pottinger and to my late deceased daughter, Jannet Doak, the Hous in High Street with the halfe of the Parkes belonging to the said Hous, and likewise the half conveniency of Brewhouse and Gardins and 100 pounds;—all which goes to him at the age of 21 years. If grandson should die before attaining that age, I make his father, Thomas Pottinger, the heir—H. D.
(At the top of this will the name is written Diroack. Its date is 1669).

Thomas Pottinger, husband of Jannet Doak, was Sovereign of Belfast, 1688, appointed by the government of James II. He was a Presbyterian and is mentioned in Kilpatrick's Presbyterian Loyalty pp. 423-425. His burial is mentioned in the Funeral Register of the First and Second Presbyterian congregations of 1715, April 6. Mr. Thomas Poringe his ffunerall of McPeter Troall. The burial was an honourable and expensive one.

THE DOAKS IN AMERICA—WHENCE THEY CAME—WHO THEY ARE.

Most Doak families in America are able to trace their Ancestry to "The North of Ireland." Those who are not able to trace them, generally believe that they came from the North of Ireland. Those of the name now living in the Mother Country are to be found in the vicinity of Dromore, in County Down and adjoining counties.

The familiar family names so oft repeated in the genealogies of this book and in the Index to Deeds in Ireland which is also published herein, are found oft-repeated in other Doak families in America.

There is a general family resemblance in stature, in disposition, and in appearance. The Doaks are religiously inclined, are generally self-supporting yet few are rich, having sufficient food and raiment they are usually content therewith.

On rare occasions do the Doaks reach positions of prominence, but on more rare occasions are they to be found in trouble. They are quiet, unobtrusive, law abiding; lovers of country, of home, of their families. They are clannish—fond of the name "Doak," and deeply interested in their relatives. They are sociable, neighborly, charitable, hospitable, helpful to all, and each possesses a large circle of friends. These characteristics are evident even though many generations of inter-marriage with other families, the descendants remaining typical Doaks. Wherever he may live, and whatever name he may bear, the descendant of a Doak is always a Doak.

They are just good, common people; and was it not President Lincoln who said, "God must have loved the common people best, for He created most of them."

GRANDCHILDREN OF THE PIONEERS, YET LIVING:

At the time of the publication of this book, September, 1931, there are yet living five grandchildren and the widows of four other grandchildren of Samuel and Mary Elizabeth Doak, as follows:

Mrs. Samantha Doak, Route 1, Parkersburg, W. Va., born March 22, 1841, widow of John Doak (son of Robert Doak).

Mrs. Margaret Doak, Pennsboro, W. Va., born October 31, 1848, widow of Freeman Doak (son of Robert Doak).

Mrs. Sarah (Doak) Hess, Central Station, W. Va., born April 17, 1857, widow of Gorrell Doak (son of Alexander Doak).

Mrs. Elizabeth Knight, 1008 Second St., Abilene, Kansas, born July 23, 1845, daughter of Samuel Doak, Jr.

Mrs. Agnes Evans, Route 2, West Union, W. Va., born April 6, 1852, daughter of Samuel Doak, Jr.

Napoleon Doak, Pennsboro, W. Va., born February 18, 1862, son of Samuel Doak, Jr.

Mrs. Alice E. Doak, Concordia, Kansas, born January 4, 1856, widow of George W. Doak (son of Hiram Doak).

Waitman Doak, Alton, Kansas, born February 28, 1853, son of Hiram Doak.

Mrs. Jennie Griffin, R. D. Mole Hill, W. Va., born July 29, 1856, daughter of Margaret "Peggy" (Doak) Williamson.

The Author respectfully suggests that so long as these grandchildren of the Pioneers are living, birthday cards or other tokens of remembrance be sent to them on their birthdays by all descendants of the CHILD of the Pioneers in whose family these names appear.

With the Compliments and Best Wishes of the Author, an autographed copy of this book is being sent gratis to each of those named on this page, as an expression of appreciation for their prompt responses to the many inquiries he has recently made of them.
